LETTER TO FARMERS.

What May Be Done for the Bright, Ambitious Farmer's Son.

W. Quad Tells What He Would De for a Boy of the Right Sort-A Word to the Wise Granger.

[Detroit Free Press.] An Ohio farmer wrote the other day, ask-ing: "Why don't you write something for country boys." What has been written has applied to all boys in a general way, but in this article I will hit the country boys in To be a farmer's son is too often, to be drudge. The farmer himself is one, and he cannot spare his son. In some cases this must necessarily be so, but there are many excep tions. To be a farmer means to be out of bed at daylight and hard work until sundown. It means, in the majority of cases, plain clothes, plain fare and few privileges. The farmer himself may not care for the concert and circus and excursion, and in his selfishness he refuses his boys such privileges. After his back-breaking work of the day he may not care to sit down with with a newspaper or book, but that is no rea-son why he shouldn't have those things in the house for his boys and girls. I know plenty Villite

Industry and girls. I know plenty of farmers with cash in bank who are too stingy to take anything beyond a local weekly newspaper. They make any old buggy do. They have no pride about their horses and harmesses. They buy slop clothes for the boys, pinch 'em down to the last cent, and then wender that they down to the last cent,

He has just as much brain and in his young days was the best looking. The lawyer's son has been schooled and his mind expanded while the farmer's son has been toiling and drudging. Cultivation, education and asso ciations have made the lawyer's son a finelooking young man. Snow, wind, rain, hard work and bitterness of spirit have so changed the looks of the farmer's son that he i ashamed of himself. I am not going to advise farmers in the To Office over Harding & Fisher's book store, Main Street, Wichita, Kausas. i6-Im case, but I'll tell you what I'd do if I was a farmer and had a boy about 15 years of age whom I wanted to follow the same pursuit. I'd have kept him in school up to this time. and he'd be fairly posted in geography, grammar, mathematics, orthography and chirography. I should have sent him to school in town in order that he might have the rough corners sandpapered down by contact with society. If he had any musical talent I'd encourage it. I'd allow him so much money per week, and advise with him until he could spend it intelligently. Pd get him good clothes and encourage him to be neat and

The farm should be mapped, every field numbered, and we'd open a book account to show how many dol-lars and day's work were expended for cerpartner. We'd read together, discuss and plan together, and while I endeavored to make him feel his responsibility, I should do nothing to make him lose his independence. Intelligence and energy rightly applied to farm labor would give every farmer's boy a holiday in every week of the year. Let him go fishing or hunting, or swimming or riding. Let him go to town and consult buyers and sellers and post up. Let him have books and papers and tools. Give him a chance to earn omething and to own something. Surprise him some day by the statement that he is not a slave whose only return for his hard work are slop clothes, cheap fare and poor lodgings. Crockett, The Lion King.

[Inter Ocean.]

A lion king well known to two hemispheres

A lion king well known to two hemispheres was Crockett, whose mother had been formerly known as Miss Cross, the Nottinghamshire giantess. She was six feet nine inches in height, and proportionately large, but very handsome and prepossessing. Crockett was a musician in Sanger's circus, but was suffering from a weakness of the chest, which his performance on the band instrument in the same of the chest, which his performance on the band instrument in the same of the chest, which his performance on the band instrument in the same of the chest was suffering from a weakness of the chest, which his performance on the band instrument in the same of the chest was suffering from a weakness of the chest, which his performance on the band instrument in the same of the protection of every depositor is pledged the last dollar of our fortune.
